There is Inside Football the Same as in Baseball

Quick Thinking Often Changes Defeat Into Victory—Brains Count as Well as Brawn—Much Depends on the Quarterback.

New York, N. Y., Nov. 10.—There is an "inside" football just as well as an "inside" baseball. The great difference is that there is so much more inside football that not only does the average spectator miss it, but the players and coaches themselves see little of it. At present it seems that the possibilities of "inside" football are unlimited.

Every player on a team has chances to pull off inside work, but the position which most needs the ability to grasp a situation and grapple with it in a new way is that of quarterback. Around the little man who calls the signals for the big eleven open a thousand possibilities for inside play, and many are the quarterbacks who do not take advantage of their opportunities. That is why the "head" quarterbacks, that is, those who can run a team on the field as well as the coach on the side line could direct it, may be counted on the fingers of one hand.

The quarterback must keep in mind the number of the down, the distance to be gained, the position on the field, the length of time that remains to be played, the individual and collective strength of his own men, and the individual and collective strength and weakness of his opponents, the probabilities of the officials, and the number and kind of plays at his disposal. All of these things must be considered in a single instant, and decision given sometimes in a fraction of a second, frequently while rising from the ground or struggling to be disengaged from the mass, the frequently when suffering from painful injuries. And yet their say it requires no brains to play football.

Seldom Get Any Credit.

A football player seldom gets credit for "inside" work for the reason that the grandstand does not recognize it. Just a few instances: Under the new rules it is sometimes more advisable for a member of a team on the defense to drop a forward pass which he has caught than to hold it. This is on the occasion of a forward pass on a third down. A defensive half-back has a chance to catch the ball, but sees that he would be downed without carrying the ball back to the line where it started. In this case, the right play is to touch the ball and let it drop to the ground, so that the ball will then be brought back to the place where it started and given to his side. To the grandstand this play properly executed would be hissed by the unthinking.

Again, a quarterback in the safety position is standing almost on his own goal line. The ball is kicked to him. He can't make an easy catch, but the heady man in this case will usually allow the ball to fly or bounce across the goal line. The defensive side is then allowed to take the ball out to the 25-yard line and put it in play. If he elects to catch it he will probably be downed before reaching that line. Yet quarterbacks have been called dubs and poor catches by the grandstand for this play. The same procedure should be used where a high kick-off is kicked so as to pass or bounce over the goal line immediately, especially where the ends coming down under the kick are fast. The heady backfielder of these days runs outside and continues parallel to the goal line for a few paces in order to tempt some unwary man or the other team to tackle him and secure a penalty against the tackler.

Coaches Have Trick Methods.

Almost all coaches have devices for getting the other team offside. The favorite device of Bill Roper, now director at Princeton, was a peculiar system of signals. The series containing the charging number would be called and immediately after the last integer called the team would count two to themselves and charge. Other teams found it impossible to ascertain themselves to this system of charging, which was without any apparent signal. It mystified the opposing teams and they began charging a couple of seconds after a series which did not contain the charging number and were caught offside. False starts and twitches of the ball by the snapper back also accomplish the same object.

A very questionable kind of inside work is the system of "working" on the injured knee or other injured part of an opponent in the hope of weakening him and making an opening. To forestall this, injured players frequently cover their good knees occasionally with bandages, thus tricking their opponent to direct his energies where they will do least harm.

The use of the unexpected play to the quintessence of inside play. One of the most successful things at times is the repetition of a play which has just failed. Two plungers have tried in succession to pierce through guard and the man defending the spot counts himself safe from a third attack. Another play of the same kind under these circumstances will frequently take him unawares and result in a substantial gain.

A thousand other possibilities are open to the student of the game for inside work. Running with the ball, passing, kicking—each has a dozen little tricks which spell defeat or victory if taken advantage of or neglected at this psychological moment.

Georgetown Charges that West Point Soaked its Gridiron for Saturday Game

THE West Point team is being severely censured on account of the game with Georgetown last Saturday, which ended in a tie score. Several serious charges are being made against the cadets. Georgetown, according to experts, although out-weighted, both out-gained and out-played the West Pointers. In the first place, Georgetown supporters say that the West Point field had been soaked with water and the field was in a soggy condition during the game. This was supposed to have been done purposely, as the grounds and roads in the immediate vicinity of the gridiron were dry.

It is well known that the cadet team this year is at its best on a soft and soggy field, as it was on account of this that they outplayed Yale in their game this year, as the Yale team is of the most disreputable of the present season. Another charge is made against the officials, as the Georgetown team does not understand how it was penalized 11 times during the game for a total of 135 yards.

Some clever fights are booked for Friday and Saturday in the different cities which will please the fight fans. At Buffalo, N. Y., Friday, Bat Nelson is slated for a 10 round go with Tommy Moore. On Saturday, Joe Rivera, the Mexican fighter, will meet Frankie Conley in a 20 round affair at Vernon, Cal. George Brown will meet Jack Dillon in a six round match at Pittsburgh and Mike Glabona will meet Willie Lewis in a 10 round fight in New York.

A Packey McFarland-Ad Wolfst fight seems to be a sure thing. Packey is booked for a conference with Tom Jones, Wolfst's manager, and about all that will have to be done is the signing up of the articles. The articles are already made out and have been for some time awaiting for the signatures of the two contestants, and from now on it looks as if the two speed boys will finally come to a settlement. The fight, if finally arranged for, will be held in San Francisco, January 1.

Western football honors are up to Wisconsin to decide who will take them for the 1911 season. They must decide this point in the game which they will play with Minnesota, a week from Saturday. Wisconsin and Minnesota are the only two teams in the western college football which are known as the Big Eight, that have not been beaten this year. Minnesota did away with Chicago's aspirations for championship honors by decisively defeating it last Saturday, and so now the whole thing remains on the outcome of the game between the "Badgers" and the "Gophers."

The Minnesota team cannot be improved upon much, because as it stands it is one of the best football machines in the country. Williams has built up an organization this year that can hardly be beaten and had the team in its best form early in the season, so as he now has only to keep the men in condition for the game with Wisconsin. Wisconsin, on the other hand, will have to do a lot of work in the week before the game with Minnesota. This is the first time in several years that the "Badgers" have had a chance to lay any claim to the western title, and they will probably put their best in the game in order to win.

Ira Thomas, the athletic catcher, will soon be a rival of Christy Mathewson.

Athletics Too Strenuous for Girls Declare These Physicians

CALIFORNIAN WINS.

New York, N. Y., Nov. 10.—In a fast rough fight here last night, Walter Coffey, a Californian, defeated Young Loughrey, of Philadelphia, in a ten round bout. Jeff Smith was scheduled to meet Coffey, but owing to a broken hand was unable to fight.

New York, Nov. 10.—Prominent physicians have come to the conclusion that strenuous exercise taken by girl college students is harmful and has a tendency to weaken their physical condition and is a handicap to motherhood. Dr. Henry Savage, a well known authority on physical culture, recently said:

"Why should women want to be so muscular? Mere physical strength commands the lowest wage. Overdevelopment of the muscular system in women instead of aiding them in the exercise of those functions natural to the sex. The woman who is muscle-bound lacks physical and consequent mental flexibility and pliancy."

The ideal of the athletic and physical culture teacher should be perfect health and mental and physical ability, not mere muscle. The photographs show some of the exercises that Dr. Savage thinks are harmful to girls. The upper picture shows a fair athlete indulging in the too strenuous pole vault. The center shows the college girls undergoing the terrific strain of a hurdle race, and below a struggle of school girl competitors in a game of basketball.

SCALPING SCANDAL TO BE INVESTIGATED

National Commission Sets December 11 For Announcing the Result

Cincinnati, Ohio, Nov. 10.—That the National commission has obtained evidence regarding the charge that ticket scalping was prevalent during the recent world's baseball series in New York and Philadelphia, was indicated when the commission definitely decided to pursue an investigation.

A meeting will be held by the commission in New York on December 11, at which the result of the investigation will be announced. Not a semblance of a clue as to along what lines the investigation is to be conducted or what evidence was displayed before the meeting, was made public.

The commission decided by a unanimous vote that in the future the ticket sales for world's series games shall be conducted by business representatives of the commission, under direction of its members.

If the investigation now under way develops proof that warrants such action, the commission will, in a final fix the responsibility, regardless of whether a club or any of its employees be affected. The other hand, no substantial testimony is produced that either a club or any of its officials or employees are at fault, the commission will go on record as exonerating them.

The commission was in session for five hours and the major part of the time was devoted to the ticket scalping question.
